HOW ARE STATES SPENDING THEIR STIMULUS?

A month after President Obama signed the $787 billion economic stimulus law, governors and state lawmakers have already begun fighting with Washington and each other about putting the money to use.

After the bill first passed, we reviewed the economic stimulus package to access how much was allocated to higher education. Now that most of the funds have been dispersed or promised, individual states are making determinations as to how the stimulus money will be spent, or accepted. Responses are mixed across the country – and across party lines...
