

Student Insurance Charge Is Not Refundable After Official Drop-Add Date Each Semester

Effective November 19, 2014, the student insurance charge is not refundable after the official drop-add date each semester because the Insurance Agency will not refund the payment for your student insurance charge back to the University.

If you do not officially drop your courses during the official drop-add period each semester, the student insurance charge is not refundable and you will be responsible for paying the student insurance charge.

If you stop going to your classes and you do not officially drop your classes during the official drop-add period, you will be responsible for paying the student insurance charge because the Insurance Agency will not refund the payment for your student insurance back to the University.

If your courses are canceled due to non-attendance after the official drop-add date, the Insurance Agency will not refund the payment for your student insurance back to the University so will be responsible for the student insurance charge.
